CHICAGO TITLE

HISTORY

The City of Oakley, incorporated in 1999, came into being through an expression of community spirit—a spirit that has been a part of Oakley since its mid-nineteenth century origins. When Samuel and Sarah Sellers arrived in 1860, the land that would become Oakley was said to be hospitable only to jackrabbits and sagebrush, though today there is archeological evidence that indigenous people were the first inhabitants of the area. The sandy soil and lack of obvious natural resources did not dampen the determination of early settlers. They set up housekeeping in the midst of the chaparral and live oak, planted orchards, and went about building a town that boasted its first school in 1862, thanks to the work of Sarah Sellers. Within twenty-five years people like James O'Hara, Randolph Marsh, and Alden Norcross were dedicating their energies to creating a full-fledged town, buying and donating land on which businesses, schools, and churches were constructed. Marsh's original purchase of twelve sandy acres became Oakley Township and the streets, Main, Acme, Ruby, Star, and Home, so christened by Marsh, recall his name today. As the nineteenth century was about to become the twentieth, Oakley had deeded right of way to the Santa Fe railroad in exchange for the establishment of a depot and a sidetrack, dedicated its post office, and planted its first cash crop: almonds.

The twentieth century brought more visionary and public-spirited people to Oakley—families who built businesses and provided services to the growing community. Oakley's first hotel, library, hardware and feed store, women's club, and vineyards all came into being between 1910 and 1915. The Roaring Twenties saw Oakley's first bank open for business, the installation of streetlights, a fire that destroyed most of the town, and north of town a breach in the levee that claimed 2½ acres of farmland. The land was never reclaimed from the river and was then called, as it is now, Big Break. The Oakley spirit during the thirties and forties expressed itself in the unification of schools in the area, the building of a new Oakley School, the formation of a citizen's committee for better streets, natural gas, dial telephones, street signs, and the formation of a sewer district. As the 1950's loomed, Oakley residents could read their hometown news in the Oakley Observer, had authorized the Oakley Sanitary District to borrow $30,000 for sewer line construction, and soon had its own Chamber of Commerce. The spirit of determination and generosity that marked Oakley origins is present today as this young city plans and works for the betterment of its community, just as its earliest settlers did.

State Parks

Family camping couldn't be easier, with Brannan Island State Park just a few miles north of Oakley over the Antioch Bridge. Besides camping, there is excellent access to the delta for sailing, boating and kayaking. Mt. Diablo State Park just west of Oakley offers hiking and picnicking, and is a great place for bicycling. Link to State Parks web site: www.parks.ca.gov

Regional Parks

Within just thirty minutes of Oakley are several regional parks and open space areas with spectacular vistas of the Delta and surrounding bay, plus the valleys to the east and the hills to the west. Hiking trails, picnic areas, historic monuments, and more await you and your family for an afternoon or for the entire day. Round Valley Preserve, Contra Loma Regional Reservoir, Black Diamond Mines, and Briones Regional Park can all be found in Contra Costa County. And there is even more to explore. The East Bay Regional Park District provides and manages the Regional Parks for Alameda and Contra Costa counties. The regional park system includes 55 parks and over 1,000 miles of trails. SCHOOL SCORES

Understanding State School Rankings

The scores assigned range from a low of 1 to a high of 99. The scores represent percentage of how each school has scored in relationship to the other schools in California.

For Example. A school scoring an 80 has done 80% better than the other schools in California
